An analysis of Serbia's alignment with the European Union's foreign policy declarations and measures

Annual review for 2025

Introduction

Serbia has continued its alignment with the Common Foreign and Security Policy (CFSP) in 2025, and alignment percentages have increased. In the weeks preceding the publication of the EU Progress Report on Serbia in 2025, a wave of retroactive alignment with declarations and measures from previous months was observed. As a result, Serbia significantly improved its alignment rate, reaching 67 percent. Nevertheless, this remains the lowest rate among EU candidate and partner countries – not only in the Western Balkans but also beyond – except for Türkiye, Georgia, and Armenia.

The principal reason for the still relatively low percentage is that, in 2025, the EU adopted three new sanctions packages – the 17th, 18th and 19th – thereby expanding the scope of sanctions and, consequently, increasing the number of declarations (and accompanying restrictive measures) directed against the Russian Federation in connection with its war in Ukraine.

Alignment percentages remain primarily a descriptive indicator that reflects general trends but cannot be considered a definitive measure of progress or decline. More critical are the specific issues on which candidate and partner countries fail to align. EU foreign policy declarations and the measures they contain may address a wide range of topics, not all of which are regarded as equally important by the EU and its member states. These range from the imposition, amendment, or renewal of restrictive measures against specific countries, individuals, or entities to declarations commemorating dates of particular significance to the international community.

The most important issues are those related to the security and foreign policy interests of the EU and its member states. Accordingly, the EU closely monitors alignment on matters that affect the Union's global position, interests, and stated foreign policy and security objectives and concerns. This is the framework within which the alignment of Serbia and other candidate and partner countries is assessed.

As in previous years, Serbia has avoided aligning with most declarations and measures whose subjects are directly or indirectly related to the Russian Federation and the People's Republic of China, including those targeting their nationals, entities, or interests. Officially, one of the main reasons cited for this position remains the issue of Kosovo, as Serbia continues to seek the support of both Russia and China in various international forums, primarily the United Nations. In addition, Serbia has failed to align with declarations and measures on other issues, though in most cases these are connected in some way to Russia and the armed conflict it initiated in Ukraine.

Serbia CFSP Alignment in 2025

From 1 January to 31 December 2025, the EU issued 135 declarations calling on candidate and partner countries to align.¹ Serbia aligned with 90 declarations and the corresponding measures, while failing to align with 45.

¹ The count refers to declarations published on the EU Council's website, consilium.europa.eu. Some declarations published at the beginning of the year refer to EU Council decisions made at the end of 2024. This is because the alignment process was concluded at the beginning of 2025, and the final information about alignment was published as declarations in January 2025.

With regard to specific issues, Serbia did not align with seventeen CFSP declarations related to the war in Ukraine (all concerning restrictive measures to Russia); ten declarations related to restrictive measures against Russia; eight related to restrictive measures against Belarus (out of which seven are related to the involvement of this country in Russian war in Ukraine); four related to the EU Global Human Rights Sanctions Regime; two related each to cyber issues and cyberattacks the use of chemical weapons; and one declaration each concerning restrictive measures related to Iran and North Korea (DR Korea).

Conversely, Serbia aligned with declarations containing restrictive measures targeting individuals and/or entities related to the following countries or topics: Lebanon, Haiti, Mali, Sudan, South Sudan, Guatemala, Venezuela, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Myanmar/Burma, Tunisia, Syria, Türkiye, Iran (five declarations), Niger, Libya, Palestine, the fight against terrorism, the EU Global Human Rights Sanctions Regime (three declarations), Al-Qaeda/ISIL, the war in Ukraine (four declarations), Burundi, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, and Moldova.

Regarding political declarations- EU statements (those not containing restrictive measures), Serbia aligned with declarations related to the commemoration of important international dates, the situation between India and Pakistan, Iran, Israel-Iran conflict, hybrid threats, Niger, the situation between Armenia and Azerbaijan, Lebanon, Mali, Sudan, the situation in Israel/Palestine, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Tanzania, Myanmar/Burma, Syria, cyberattacks (one declaration), Russia (two declarations), the war in Ukraine (three declarations), Belarus (one declarations) and Moldova.

With regard to the war in Ukraine, the EU introduced nineteen sanctions packages between 23 February 2022 and 31 December 2025. Sanctions initially began following the annexation of Crimea and the outbreak of conflict in the Donbas region in 2014, after which the EU progressively expanded its restrictive measures – particularly after the full-scale Russian invasion of Ukraine in 2022. These measures include individual sanctions targeting specific persons and entities, as well as sectoral restrictions affecting finance and business, energy and transport, dual-use goods and advanced technology, trade, exclusion from public contracts and EU funds, visa bans, measures against disinformation, and other areas. Additional sanctions targeted Russian exports of oil, gold, and various other goods.

At the time of writing, sanctions target more than 2,700 individuals and entities.² They have been primarily implemented through revisions and amendments to EU Council Decision No. 145 of 2014 (individual sanctions) and Decision No. 512 of 2014 (sectoral sanctions). The EU also introduced measures that encompass Russian-controlled regions of Ukraine. Council Decision No. 386 of 2014 introduced restrictive measures in response to the illegal annexation of Crimea and Sevastopol. Furthermore, Council Decision No. 266 of 2022 established specific sanctions targeting individuals responsible for the Russian occupation of Ukrainian regions - initially Donetsk and Luhansk, and later Kherson and Zaporizhzhia.

Restrictive measures were also introduced against individuals and entities involved in destabilizing hybrid actions by Russia against the EU, Ukraine, and other countries. These actions include intimidation, sabotage, subversion, foreign information manipulation and interference, disinformation, malicious cyber activities, and the instrumentalization of migrants. These measures are implemented under the framework established by Council Decision No. 2643 of 2024.

² EU sanctions against Russia, <https://www.consilium.europa.eu/en/policies/sanctions-against-russia/>, retrieved January 4, 2026

Of the seventeen declarations related to the war in Ukraine with which Serbia failed to align, eight refer to updates of Council Decision No. 145 of 2014 and another eight to Decision No. 512 of 2014. Seven declarations refer to updates of Decision No. 2643 of 2024, and one to Decision No. 386 of 2014. However, Serbia retroactively aligned with two declarations related to Decision No. 266 of 2022.

As in previous years, Serbia aligned with sanctions based on Council Decision No. 119 of 2014, which extends sanctions against former Ukrainian President Viktor Yanukovich and his associates.

In total, this represents a limited improvement, as the scope of sanctions with which Serbia chose to align has expanded. It is noteworthy that updates related to Decision No. 266 of 2022 are consistent with Serbia's stated support for Ukraine's territorial integrity, as Serbia does not recognize Russia's annexation of the four Ukrainian regions. While this provides a rationale for alignment, Serbia nevertheless failed to align with updates related to the occupation of Crimea and Sevastopol introduced under Council Decision No. 386 of 2014.

Serbia also aligned with three political declarations related to the war in Ukraine: one calling for a ceasefire at the front line; one concerning the then-ongoing Ukraine–U.S. negotiations in Saudi Arabia; and, for the first time, a declaration (issued each year since 2014) commemorating the downing of Malaysia Airlines flight MH17 in 2014 above Ukraine and calling for the prosecution of those responsible.

Overall, Serbia has taken limited steps to improve its alignment with declarations and measures related to the war in Ukraine; however, these steps do not fully indicate an intention to align with the core elements of the EU's approach.

Regarding Russian actions outside the direct scope of the war in Ukraine, Serbia failed to align with all seven declarations updating Council Decision No. 2643 of 2024. Nevertheless, Serbia aligned with two political declarations protesting Russian actions: one concerning a drone breach of Polish airspace, and another condemning the Zapad-2025 military exercise conducted by Russia and Belarus.

In addition, Serbia again failed to align with three updates of sanctions introduced under Council Decision No. 1484 of 2024, which were adopted in response to Russia's prosecution of opposition activists and independent media. These sanctions were initially triggered by the treatment of opposition leaders Alexei Navalny and Vladimir Kara-Murza, their associates, and certain opposition media outlets. It should be noted that in 2023 Serbia aligned with a political EU declaration protesting Navalny's treatment in prison.

Sanctions against Belarus are closely linked to the broader context of Russia's war in Ukraine. The EU has expanded restrictive measures originally introduced in 2012 under Council Decision No. 642. Since 2022, following Belarus's support for the invasion of Ukraine and the consequences of authoritarian nature of President Alexander Lukashenko's regime, the EU has progressively tightened its sanctions regime. In 2025, the EU issued eight declarations related to Belarus, none of which Serbia aligned with. As in previous cases, Serbia aligned only with a political declaration issued in late October 2025 protesting the violation of Lithuanian airspace by meteorological balloons, which were assessed as part of a broader hybrid campaign.

Cybersecurity represents another important area of EU foreign policy declarations, frequently involving Russia and China. In 2025, the EU issued three declarations related to malicious cyber activity. The first, published on 11 February, added three Russian nationals linked to the Main Directorate of the General Staff of the Armed Forces of the Russian Federation (GRU) to the sanctions list under Council Decision No. 797 of 2019. The second declaration, issued on 28 May, updated information for six Russian nationals connected to the GRU and suspected of cyberattacks in the Netherlands and Germany. The third declaration, published on 23 May, condemned a cyberattack against the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Czechia attributed to Advanced Persistent Threat 31 (APT31), linked to China's Ministry of State Security. Serbia aligned only with the third declaration, which was political in nature and adopted retroactively.

Another recurring topic concerns sanctions under the EU Global Human Rights Sanctions Regime (EUGHRSR). In 2025, the EU issued seven related declarations. The first, issued on 10 January following Council Decision No. 3004 of 2024, amended listings for 31 individuals and nine entities—most of whom were Russian nationals or Wagner Group-linked entities, with additional Chinese nationals included. The second declaration, issued on 3 May, amended listings for two Russian nationals.

Serbia aligned with three subsequent declarations issued on 4, 25, and 30 July; however, these did not target Russian or Chinese nationals or entities. Serbia did not align with the final two declarations. The first, issued on 7 October, targeted officials of the Russian Federal Penal Enforcement Service in Crimea and Sevastopol for human rights violations. The second, issued on 22 December, targeted 27 individuals and 12 entities linked to human rights violations in China, Russia, the Central African Republic, Sudan, Afghanistan, South Sudan, Israel, Syria, Lebanon, and North Korea.

With respect to other Russia-related issues, the situation in the Republic of Moldova is particularly notable. While Serbia previously avoided alignment, in 2025 it aligned with all three declarations concerning restrictive measures related to Russian actions in Moldova, including sanctions targeting the leadership of Transnistria and individuals and entities linked to pro-Russian political forces and media outlets undermining democracy and the rule of law.

Serbia also did not align with the extension of sanctions against Iran, issued in a declaration of 7 August, which were imposed in response to Iran's military support for Russia's war of aggression against Ukraine, as well as its support for armed groups and entities in the Middle East and the Red Sea region.

Serbia also failed to align with updated restrictive measures against North Korea. These sanctions, originally imposed in response to North Korea's nuclear and ballistic missile programmes, have since 2024 also targeted individuals and entities supporting Russia's war in Ukraine. Among those newly sanctioned are three individuals responsible for maintaining close ties with Russia, either by directly supporting its military efforts in Ukraine or by assisting in the circumvention of EU sanctions on Russian oil and gas exports.

Finally, on 4 June 2025, the EU issued a declaration amending the sanctions related to the proliferation and use of chemical weapons under Council Decision No. 1544 of 2018. The amendment added three Russian institutions to the list of sanctioned entities. On 29 October, the sanctions have been extended for another year with another declarations. Serbia did not align with both of them.

Issue of Retroactive Alignment in 2025 and Inconsistencies in Alignment

One notable feature of this period is Serbia's practice of so-called retroactive alignment. This possibility was initially introduced in 2014 and 2015, when EU candidate, potential candidate, and partner countries faced limited timeframes to align with EU CFSP declarations and measures. At the time, the EU accepted this request as justified. However, in 2025, as part of its efforts to open Cluster 3 of the accession negotiations, Serbia made extensive use of retroactive alignment, particularly in the weeks preceding the publication of the EU Progress Report on Serbia (as explicitly noted in the report itself).³ In addition to previously mentioned cases, several further examples illustrate this pattern.

The most indicative examples are declarations related to restrictive measures that fall under Council Decision no. 266 from 2022 which were previously mentioned.

The EU also issued a declaration on Mali amending the scope of restrictive measures originally introduced in 2017 and subsequently updated in 2021. The latest amendment added several Malian officials and politicians to the sanctions list. Although the declaration does not explicitly state the reasons for their inclusion, all listed individuals have been linked to support for the Wagner Group and the Russian Africa Corps operating in Mali. In addition, Mali recently severed diplomatic relations with Ukraine, which may help explain Serbia's initial decision not to align with this declaration.

At the same time, several inconsistencies in Serbia's alignment behaviour are evident. A prominent example concerns Venezuela. Serbia aligned with an EU political declaration condemning the fraudulent 2024 presidential elections and the repression of opposition figures and independent media by President Nicolás Maduro's regime, as well as with two declarations imposing restrictive measures. Despite this formal alignment, the Speaker of Serbia's National Assembly, Ana Brnabić, attended President Maduro's inauguration ceremony in 2025.

Another example relates to Moldova. In 2025, anti-government activists from Moldova with reported links to Russia organised a training camp in Serbia. According to publicly available information, Serbian authorities reacted only after the issue was exposed by the media. As noted above, Serbia nevertheless aligned with all EU CFSP declarations related to Moldova during 2025, one of them retroactively.

The practice of retroactive alignment and the observed inconsistencies indicate a discrepancy between what is objectively possible and what Serbia perceives as "a matter of trade" with the EU. Therefore, Serbia continues to pursue a multivector approach to foreign policy, within which CFSP alignment is not treated as a priority, at least without concrete benefits for the ruling elite.

Alignment with EU foreign policy declarations by other countries

In 2025, Serbia's alignment with EU declarations remained among the lowest compared to other candidate and partner countries, standing at 67 percent (excluding Türkiye and Georgia). By contrast, North Macedonia, Montenegro, Bosnia and Herzegovina, and Albania continued their longstanding trend of near-full alignment, each achieving alignment rates of 99 or 100 percent. The new candidate countries, Ukraine and Moldova, reached alignment levels of 99 and 89 percent, respectively. Only Georgia and Türkiye remained at the bottom of the alignment scale, with alignment rates of 47 percent and 3 percent, respectively.

All partner countries participating in the European Economic Area (EEA) recorded alignment rates above 86 percent.

Within the framework of the EU's Eastern Partnership, Armenia - affected by its deteriorating relationship with Russia, the recent conflict in Nagorno-Karabakh, and pressure from Azerbaijan - increased its alignment rate to 40 percent, up from 30 percent in the previous year. Azerbaijan, by contrast, did not align with any EU declarations during this period.
